REDXA President's Report

Believe it or not I will be attending this month's meeting! I missed last month due being in West Virginia to attend my granddaughter's 5th birthday. Thanks to all who "stepped up to the plate" in my absence. While there I had an "eyeball qso" with K4JWA who I met on the air during Field Day. His exchange indicated he was in WV and I mentioned my daughter lives in Barboursville and he told me he did too! He told me to look him up next time I was there so I did. We went out to dinner one night along with W8OI who I had previously met and had a great time "chewing the rag".

As you know this month is time for club elections. I've heard that it looks like the existing elected officials are being "railroaded" to run again but I encourage you to nominate others. We have several new members and several old members who could offer some new blood to the club.

Don't forget to nominate someone you feel deserves the REDXA "Spirit Award". This is basically member of the year. Someone who has contributed above and beyond the call of duty. All nominations should be forwarded to Jim Selmi/K6JS the chairman for that award. Being last year's winner earned him that title.

CQP went pretty well for me this year. I went back to Glenn county again and had lots of fun. I'm afraid we didn't do very well overall as a club this year but the main thing is to enjoy the contest and to be somewhat "rare dx" for the weekend. I did not do a very good job of rallying the troops this year and promise to encourage a better turn out next year.

Take care and 73, Fred

On DX'ing

The bands seem to be full of operators, some new, some old, who don't understand or follow the "Best Practices for DX Operating". Some truly don't know. Some truly don't care. They belong to the "me first" mentality. There is and always has been, huge competition in pile ups. There are ways of getting through them. There are timing and frequency techniques THAT WORK. (You don't need 2000k).

Along with the unwillingness to "hang in there", and try and try, comes the frustration factor. Unfortunately many of my generation want the instant gratification.

DQRM (Deliberate interference) is on the rise. Some are delighted by the attention they get by the "band cops" and others. I call THEM the pigs. You never engage with a pig. He enjoys the attention, and you both wallow in the mud.

The second group feel if they can't get through, they are somewhat inadequate. So if they can't get through, they won't let anyone else.

Others are enjoying a nice rag chew, when a DX station shows up on the frequency they are talking on. So they get mad, and rather than move, they get "even".

(Remember when we were taught to announce "is the frequency in use" and then LISTEN CAREFULLY? Then repeat twice more?)

Other DX stations sometimes can't hear the domestic QSO in progress. Because of LOCATION and ANTENNAS, we all don't hear equally.

The "HAM CRAM" One Day Wonders don't help. Once you get your license you need to practice and continue to learn. The license just opens the door. It doesn't prepare you to operate. I had one "One Day Wonder" (Actually "3 days"-Technician-General-Extra) tell me he had the PERFECT ANTENNA. When I asked him how he knew it was perfect, he said the SWR was 1:1! I asked him if he had ever heard of a dummy load? He admitted he didn't. I told him it too had a SWR of 1:1, but didn't radiate past his front door.

This also means WE need to Mentor. I have 2 hams I am mentoring now, and in turn, I am asking questions of some of the more experienced people. It is, and should be a continuing learning experience.

Sometimes the DX station causes the problem. Since they set the rules, they MUST follow them! Whether they are running split, working continents, working "by the numbers", they must follow the pattern they set, or else announce the change.

You can't be working 5's in USA, and take a Europe call, just because they are loud.

On splits: SSB 5-10 up (or down) is fine. I found one yahoo working SSB up 5-25, effectively tying up 20khz of spectrum + the 3kz he was calling on???

Please occasionally announce you're call. AND PLEASE say QRZ after EACH successful QSO. Or else we don't know if we should call, and risk QRM'ing the reporting station.

Finally, I want to thank the hams that have helped me. I am sorry for all the hair you pulled out while helping me. Red KF6D(sk), Gary W6GWJ (sk), Hank W6DTV(sk), Bob W6BNB(sk), Chuck N6OJ, Ron N6IE, Al K6RIM, and Len K6ANP (who taught me to LISTEN, LISTEN, then LISTEN SOME MORE!)
